SR Technics and Swiss AviationSoftware offer joint AMOS interface solution June 2014

Common customers to benefit from new interfaces

SR Technics and Swiss AviationSoftware have jointly implemented integrated system interfaces between AMOS and SR Technics' SAP. The new functionalities cover customer requirements for an "all in one" system solution and will improve efficiency, transparency and ultimately on-time-delivery.

Ronald Schaeuffele, CEO of Swiss-AS, said: "It is always our ambition to offer common customers the ability to seamlessly integrate and to transfer maintenance data between an airline and its MRO provider – making life easier for all involved parties."

Four interfaces mark the start of further interface functionalities planned for upcoming AMOS releases between fall 2014 and spring 2015. All functionalities will provide enhanced levels of service to customers in areas extending from Component Services to Aircraft Services.

The functionalities are based on the latest techniques and the standard AMOS process landscape, and cover the major requirements of most airline operators. As a result, they can be rolled out to new customers without the need for significant changes to existing systems.
